Coastguard Agency

The UK is surrounded by over 10500 miles of coastline. It's a marvellous educational and leisure resource but, to the unwary, a visit to the seaside could end in disaster. The Coastguard Agency is dedicated to reducing the number of incidents involving young people and wishes to work with teachers and outdoor activity staff to enhance seaside safety awareness amongst both primary and secondary age pupils. A resource pack containing a number of lively, imaginative and useful classroom materials has been produced for primary schools and a secondary version is in the pipeline.

999 Coastguard: The Seashore Safety Awareness Pack for Primary Schools

This pack which is aimed at Key Stage 1 and 2 contains an animated video, activity sheets, a poster, a booklet describing the history of the Coastguard and a teachers' guide booklet. It also includes details of UK Coastguard Rescue Centres, many of which offer educational visits and Coastguard - School links. Primary schools will receive a voucher to entitle them to their free copy of 999 Coastguard.

For further information please contact: Public Relations, The Coastguard Agency, 1/17a Spring Place, 105 Commercial Road, Southampton, SO15 1EG, tel: 01703 329395.

Internet Resources

During the last year commercial and government sponsored support schemes have encouraged an increasing number of schools to connect to the Internet. The NSSA was one of the pioneering sailing organisations to set up a 'home page' or 'web site' offering information to users.

Finding sailing-related sites is made particularly easy by 'search engines' which allow the user to type in key words and search in much the same way as looking through an encyclopaedia. An alternative is to access a known address and many professional and commercial organisations now quote an Internet address along with their telephone and fax numbers.

The selection of useful Internet addresses below is followed by a brief description of the BT Global Challenge - an example of a rich educational resource available at the time of publication. From this, teachers and pupils can extract text, maps and pictures and down-load them for use in their own assignments.

The BT Global Challenge - the world's toughest yacht race

The BT Global Challenge web page is selected here as an example of a rich resource bank which is current at the time of publication. Although the race ran from September 1996 to July 1997, in common with many topical Internet resources, the information will be available for some time after the completion of the race.

A screen dump of the BT Global Challenge title page on the Internet.

Each of these ten icons leads to its own chapter of this 'encyclopaedia' of information.

Follow the world's toughest yacht race around the world with your own personal copy of the BT Global Challenge race programme.

The following information which has been downloaded from the Internet is a minute sample of what is available from this site.

The BT Global Challenge site at <http://www.btchallenge.com> offers a range of education resource materials - what to get and where to get it!

- National Curriculum Key Stages 1, 2, 3 and 4
- Vocational activities - Post 16
- GNVQ/GSVQ
- The BT Global Challenge web site - the main public web site for the Challenge event

The BT Global Challenge offers a wide range of stimuli and starting points - an ideal opportunity for a virtual experience - sail the world from your classroom!

1997 will be the twenty-fifth anniversary of Chay Blyth's record breaking solo circum-navigation of the world via the East-West route in his ketch British Steel.

On 29th September 1996 over 132 volunteer crew members will leave Southampton aboard 14 identical steel built yachts, each sponsored by an international company, to sail on the world's toughest yacht race. They will sail around the world 'the wrong way', against prevailing winds and currents. They will compete against the elements, coping with discomfort, extremes of weather conditions and against each other, in their bid to win the Princess Royal Trophy.

On their return, the crews will have developed into effective teams, worked efficiently to repair the inevitable gear breakages such a voyage will incur and will have developed high levels of determination, skill and stamina. They will have experienced something very special which they are unlikely to repeat. Their experiences and the journey they undertake can be used by teachers as a vehicle and context for curriculum delivery.

BT Global Challenge teaching resources are provided as a stimulus for the delivery of existing curriculum plans for the curriculum 5 -17. They are not intended to be prescriptive nor exhaustive. They aim to encourage the use of the Challenge as a focus and a catalyst, to stimulate and enthuse pupils in areas of the curriculum already being taught. For some teachers this will not be a new approach, having already used the British Steel Challenge race in 1992/93 as a teaching and learning context.

The activities and ideas provided are not all new but should provide teachers with ideas they can develop to match the needs of individual pupils and subject areas. They will also trigger further development in breadth and depth of existing curriculum content and could encourage schools and clusters to give consideration to progression issues.

As a basis for personal social development, looking at developing the whole person, values, cultures, role models, the venture provides cross-curricular activities with a Challenge dimension, highlighting the importance of teamwork, delegation, perseverance and achievement.

NSSA

The National School Sailing Association promotes sailing and water based activities for young people as part of their education. It was formed in 1961 by a small group of teachers interested in promoting sailing in schools. Membership developed rapidly to include other educational establishments, Local Education Authorities, and many County Sailing Associations. A Registered Charity, it is recognised by the Department of Education, Sports Council and the RYA. The NSSA is run by committed teachers and educationalists who voluntarily put in a great deal of time and effort to help other teachers and youngsters get the most out of their chosen sport.

There are many School Sailing bases throughout the country, staffed by well-qualified instructors who can both teach youngsters and train teachers and interested adults to teach sailing. The NSSA can advise you on the location of your nearest base or can help you in establishing sailing at your local school. The NSSA Award Scheme provides a method of recording achievement of basic skills and a progressive programme for youngsters learning to sail. For those youngsters who are aiming high, individuals are selected from our Championship and Regatta to represent England and are entitled to receive RYA National Team Gold Badges.

Every November, the NSSA organises a residential Course Conference over a weekend for members to meet, exchange ideas and learn about the current trends in education which affect the sport. The Annual General Meeting is another opportunity to exchange information. Our Newsletter, School Sailing Matters, is published four times a year and sent to all members, keeping them up to date with happenings in Youth Sailing and teaching sailing.

These are just some of the useful services and facilities available to members. If you work at a school where sailing is part of the curriculum or extra curricular, if you take youngsters sailing in your spare time, if you would like to teach sailing, if you think that teaching youngsters to sail gives them a useful lifetime skill, then...

Royal Yachting Association

The Royal Yachting Association is the national governing body for pleasure boating in the United Kingdom. Covering a whole range of recreational boating areas from dinghy racing to offshore yachting, from motor cruising to powerboat racing and of course windsurfing, the RYA represents an ever growing constituency. The Association itself has a personal membership of over 80,000 members and the recreational boating population is estimated at between 2.5 - 3 million people. Over 140,000 people take part in the RYA training courses across the whole range of the boating spectrum each year and the RYA courses are held in high regard throughout the world as a training standard.

As well as working to protect the interests of boating people, the RYA is also very pro-active in the encouragement of new people onto the water. Whether it be in a fast racing boat, a cruising boat or out on your windsurfer, the RYA has training and coaching schemes to suit all abilities and needs. Association work is carried out by a range of divisions including:

- Training
- Sail Cruising
- Motor Cruising
- Racing
- Windsurfing
- Membership
- Sailability

Further information about Association activities and membership can be obtained from: RYA House, Romsey Road, Eastleigh, Hants., S050 4YA, tel: 01703 627400
<http://www.marine-net.co.uk/rya/homepage.html>

Sailability

RYA Sailability's mission is to promote and co-ordinate active participation in sailing by people with disabilities. An important facet of the organisation's work is creating opportunities for integration of people with disabilities into the sailing community, which has considerable benefits for disabled and able-bodied sailors alike.

Please see fuller details in the Special section.

Youth Afloat

Youth Afloat is a registered charity, part of the Johnnie Johnson Adventure Trust. The organisation was formed in 1972 to teach water sports to disadvantaged children in the Midlands. Learning to sail or canoe sessions can be for fun or to RYA/British Canoe Union standards. Two Centres cater for young people aged 8 to 18, in individual or group sessions lasting 2 hours. Regular visitors include Scouts, Girl Guides, Youth Clubs, Air, Army and Navy Cadets and groups from schools use the Centres during term time. All are welcome, with priority being given to those with a disability or special need.
